

Personification - Writing Task 1

When we read books and watch movies, sometimes, animals talk and act like humans. This is not true in real life because animals cannot talk or drive cars or go to school like they do in movies and books.

However, when these characters act like real people, the story becomes more interesting.

Imagine that you are a talking flower in the garden. You are writing a letter to your owner about all the things that annoy you in the garden.

You could talk about:

- * The hot sun
- * The chemicals you get sprayed with so bugs don't attack you
- * Dogs peeing on you
- * Not getting enough water
- * Other flowers annoying you
- * Being scared that someone will pick you
- * The smell of manure
- * The smell of the neighbour's cat's poo
- * Little kids playing with you and pulling out your leaves
- * Tell your owner why these things annoy you and what you think should be done to stop them from happening.
